

NANCY ROSE

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS. Please take a moment to read this before hiring Nancy.

What exactly is the bottom line when you speak?

As The Acceptance Advocate, I call attention to the fundamental need of children to be accepted as they are. I teach parents how to lead with acceptance, in order to avoid lifelong battles of blame and guilt and to raise children who can thrive while being who they are.

Do you advocate “unconditional acceptance” of children?

I advocate unconditional acceptance of a child’s CoreSelf. I do not advocate unconditional acceptance of a child’s behavior.

How did you come to be a specialist in child rearing practices?

I had a difficult experience growing up as a child who was not accepted. This experience, combined with a personality that propelled me to try to make sense of it all, allowed me to understand and heal with my mother. Once I had children of my own, the bottom line became clear: children thrive when they are seen, accepted and loved for who they are. My real education began at that point, realizing through my own experience and the experience of coaching clients, that both acceptance of the child and leadership by the parents are necessary. One without the other is problematic.

I understand the importance of your experience, but what formal training have you had?

My formal training is in advocacy rather than in child development. I received my law degree from Boalt Hall School of Law, University of California, Berkeley and am a member of the California Bar. My mission is to present the case for acceptance by opening parents’ eyes to the consequences of how we treat our children, and inspiring parents and providing the tools to make necessary changes.

What differentiates you from other speakers in your field?

I’ve been told that what sets me apart is my ability to connect deeply with audiences by sharing openly, honestly and vulnerably. Once this connection occurs, I intuitively communicate my message in a way that each particular audience will best understand. Every presentation is different since every audience is different.

What is your signature presentation?

I offer three signature presentations, Raise the Child You’ve Got—Not the One You Want; Powerhouse at the Office...But Powerless at Home?; and Giving Ourselves License to Shine. They are described in detail on my website on the Speaking page.

Do you customize your presentations and if so, to what level?

I address the specific needs of clients in a Pre-Program Questionnaire that is issued at the time of the booking. Clients have the opportunity to inform me of their specific challenges so I can address them in my presentation. We begin with an existing presentation topic and tailor it for your audience.

How much do you charge for one hour, half-day and full-day programs?

Please call my office or email me and I will be happy to provide you with the fee structure for keynote presentations, breakout or concurrent sessions, as well as multiple day appearances.

Will you fill more than one slot, which will save us money on hiring another speaker and paying additional travel costs?

Yes. I offer discounted rates for multiple bookings at the same event, as well as multiple bookings for different events, as long as they are booked at the same time. My fee schedule is available upon request.

What are your payment terms?

Half of the speaking fee is required as a deposit to confirm a booking, and that is due two weeks after the program agreement is issued. The balance of the speaking fee is due two weeks prior to the appearance date. Expenses are in addition to the speaking fee and are due upon receipt of my invoice.

What if there is a need to cancel a program that is already contracted?

I have a cancellation clause in my contract. The time and circumstances of the cancellation determine the outcome. If we are able to reschedule at a future time, I make every effort to do so without additional fees.

May I arrange to preview a presentation at a nearby function to get a clear picture of your delivery, manner, language and poise?

You may audit presentations as long as I am able to secure permission from the hiring entity. Some of my appearances are open to the public. If you opt in on my website, you will receive notice about upcoming events available to the public.

How thorough is your research to understand the client's needs in order to prepare your presentation?

Once a client submits the completed pre-program questionnaire, I schedule a pre-conference call during the weeks prior to the presentation. This gives me an opportunity to make sure I fully understand the client's needs when I prepare their presentation.

Do you involve the audience during your presentation?

I involve the audience whenever possible, but the extent depends on the format of the meeting and length of my presentation. A keynote is usually less than an hour and does not include time for audience interaction other than questions-and-answers at the end. There is more flexibility with a workshop. Presentations that are half-day or full-day formats allow for more involvement from the audience.

We like our speakers to arrive early and stay after the presentation. Do you allow time for that?

I usually arrive the evening before and leave the same day I speak. This may vary if my presentation is late in the day. If organizations would like me to attend special events the evening before or following the event, please let me know. Attendance will depend on my speaking schedule the days before and after the presentations.

Do you offer books, CDs, trainings or other products following your presentation?

My book, Raise the Child You've Got—Not the One You Want is available for sale following my presentation. I have extended learning materials in production now. Depending on the desires of the organization, I can either pre-sell items to the organization in advance of my appearance, or make them available following my presentation.

How can I purchase copies of your book for the attendees at our upcoming event and is there a bulk discount?

Please contact my office at (707) 266-6178 to receive a discount rate for bulk purchases of Raise the Child You've Got—Not the One You Want for all attendees.

If we pre-purchase books, will you autograph a copy in advance for each attendee?

Yes. You will have the choice to pre-purchase books outright or order for consignment at the organization's exhibit booth at the conference. When I issue an appearance contract, you will be asked if you would like to pre-purchase books for each person in the audience and if so, whether or not you would like to have them autographed. The books will then be mailed to you prior to the appearance for distribution.
