RAISE THE CHILD YOU'VE GOT—NOT THE ONE YOU WANT!

INTERVIEW THE PARENTING COACH TEACHING PARENTS TO LEAD WITH ACCEPTANCE

At 24, successful tax attorney and CPA Nancy Rose stepped back to reflect on her academic journey. Instead of feeling accomplished, Rose realized that what pushed her towards professional success was the hope that her mother would be proud of her. As a strong-willed child, Rose often felt rejected by her mother who could not handle her persistence and tenacity. Thus, as other young professionals set out to start their lives, Rose snapped out of her “trance of accomplishment,” understanding that her desire to feel accepted by her mother led her down a path she wasn’t even happy with.

This realization, coupled with her experience raising two sons, pushed Rose in a new direction carving a path as “The Acceptance Advocate.” She now speaks and conducts parenting programs throughout the country, teaching parents that everyone thrives when parents lead with acceptance. Her new book, Raise the Child You’ve Got—Not the One You Want, helps parents identify the foundation to building a healthy parent/child connection.

“When acceptance is the starting point in parenting, it builds a warm, solid, connected foundation for a lifetime relationship of mutual respect,” says Rose. “On the other hand, when children are not seen and understood, they begin to tuck away pieces of who they are, leaving them vulnerable to negative influences.”

For a refreshingly unique interview on modern parenting, Rose breaks down her message to parent with acceptance to discuss:

- Acceptance as a fundamental human need and foundation to the parent/child connection
- How lack of acceptance from parents damages children and harms society as a whole
- The 9 traits that make up a person’s CoreSelf—the aspects of a person that are present at birth and unlikely to change over the course of a person’s lifetime—and how acceptance of these qualities enhances the parent/child connection
- How to determine your CoreSelf and your child’s CoreSelf, and identify how they align.
- Effective ways to couple acceptance with leadership in order to teach proper behavior and respect
- Why EVERYONE thrives when leading with acceptance—from less sibling rivalry to giving back to the community

- How to recognize if you're too invested in your child's success
- The manner in which adults who were not accepted as children struggle as parents

A fresh voice and original thinker in the parenting field, Nancy Rose, the “Acceptance Advocate,” speaks and conducts parenting programs throughout the country. She has spent more than 25 years studying the power of acceptance in parent-child relationships, while at home raising her two sons, in the healing process with her own mother, and professionally, as a speaker, author and parent coach. She is a premier member of the Women Speakers Association and a volunteer coach for Girls on the Run, a transformational learning program for young girls. A former tax attorney and CPA, Rose now puts her solid credentials and entrepreneurial spirit to use in service of her passion: making sure every child is given license to shine. She has two grown sons and lives in northern California.
